“Virus transformations as a consequence of pharmacological pollution in the human body/mind ecological system is a compelling hypothesis based on the data presented in George Vithoukas’ A New Model for Health and Disease. It strongly underscores the need to focus on an ‘energy’ medicine to correct the deficiencies of our present ‘chemical’ medicine.”

In this long-awaited ground-breaking treatise, theorist and homeopathic teacher George Vithoukas presents a new paradigm for modern medicine. Established medicine has failed in its mission to prevent or cure many diseases, Vithoukas asserts, because of the excessive and often needless use of powerful drugs. Western medicine has a limited view of the total organism and the true sources of disease.

Vithoukas relates the increasing incidence of AIDS, cancer, asthma, epilepsy, schizophrenia, Alzheimer’s disease, rheumatoid arthritis, and other difficult-to-control illnesses to the weakening of the immune system from over-prescribing of drugs. Only when we fully integrate the role of the psyche, spirit and emotions into our explanations of illness, he says, will we be able to generate a fuller definition of health, and change our conception and methods of treatment.

From a New Model for Health and Disease ...

“The quality of our health depends almost entirely on the quality of microorganisms that exist normally within our body and thus form the basis of our life. If we disturb their equilibrium by pumping all this ‘mold’ into the organism, we are going to have a ‘moldy’ organism eventually.”

“The hypothesis in this treatise is that the HIV (Human Immunosuppressive Virus) would not have appeared and affected the human race in such an epidemic manner unless it had been preceded by widespread and frequent use of antibiotics which prepared the ground by breaking down the organism’s immune system.”

George Vithoukas teaches and lives in Greece. His books include "The Science of Homeopathy, Homeopathy: Medicine of the New Millenium and Levels of Health"
